items marked GREEN are new in this newsletter:

KNAW Research Funding Consultation (multidisciplinary)

Science policy decisions have a major impact on us all. However, it is not always clear who makes these decisions and whether these decisions have been made after broad consultation with the community. How can we include the voices of community members? And in doing so, how can we move from polarized stance-taking to a more nuanced discussion, acknowledging the dilemmas a policymaker may face?

By means of the Research Funding Consultation project, The Young Academy is experimenting with a collective consultation.

KNAW invites researchers to join and have a say.

Externe Onderzoeksfinanciering: Beoordeel onderzoeksvorstellen zelf

Het voorbereiden, schrijven en indienen van subsidieaanvragen voor onderzoek is een intensief proces en een enorme uitdaging; de competitie is hoog, de succeskans helaas vaak laag. Om (meer) inzicht te krijgen in de vereisten die aan succesvolle subsidieaanvragen worden gesteld, kan het interessant zijn zelf deel te nemen aan de evaluatie van onderzoeksvorstellen.

NWO, de Europese Commissie en de European Cooperation in Science and Technology zijn bijvoorbeeld op zoek naar experts voor beoordelingscommissies en/ of ten behoeve van evaluatie van subsidieaanvragen.

UKRI call (multidisciplinary)

This grant supports research that exploits existing data resources for social and economic research, created by the ESRC and other agencies, for comparative analysis. It also aims to develop research capacity and skills in using large and complex secondary data. Grants can be for up to £300,000 for a period of up to 24 months. Funding is based on the full economic costs of the research, with ESRC providing 80% of the cost and the research organisation covering the balance. Proposals can draw from the wider sciences, but the social sciences must represent more than 50% of the research focus and effort.

Additional primary (first-time) data collection will not be funded under this call.
