Any legal claims can only be made on the content of the Dutch regulation (Regeling tegemoetkoming reiskosten woon-werkverkeer Universiteit Leiden 2021).

Artikel 3 Employees with multiple appointments
1. The employee is entitled to an allowance towards commuting expenses on days that travel between the place of residence and the (fictive) place of work actually takes place. The commuting days incurred should be claimed by the employee via Self Service every month, or at least every three months following the month in which the travel takes place.
2. The commuting allowance is calculated on the basis of the one-way distance between the place of residence and the place of work or fictive place of work, measured for the fastest route using a method determined by the employer.
3. The commuting allowance amounts to 0.07 eurocent per kilometre, up to a maximum of 45 euros per month. Employees are not entitled to a commuting allowance for the first 10 kilometres.
4. Notwithstanding the provisions of the first paragraph, an employee who receives a guaranteed allowance on the grounds of article 8, or with whom special written... agreements have been made (such as a public transport pass paid for by the employer) is entitled to this guaranteed allowance or to the special agreements set out in writing. Notwithstanding the provisions of the first paragraph, an employee who has been assigned to work on location for his or her full working hours is not required to report the actual days travelled.

Article 4. Temporary suspension of the allowance
For employees to whom article 3, paragraph 4, applies, in the event that they are fully unavailable for work through illness or extraordinary leave, payment of the allowance for commuting costs will be stopped after 30 days. The allowance will resume when the extraordinary leave ends or when the employee is again available for work for 25% or more of his/her working hours.

Article 5. Change of circumstances
The employee is obliged to inform the employer immediately, via Self Service or in another manner determined by the employer, of any changes that may affect the commuting allowance, in particular the amount of the commuting allowance, such as a change in place of residence and the number of commuting days per week.

Article 6. Student assistants and trainees
The following applies for student assistants and trainees, contrary to article 3:
  a. Students and trainees who are in possession of a student travel card and who therefore do not need to incur travel expenses, are not eligible for the commuting allowance as stipulated in this regulation.
  b. If they do have to incur verifiable commuting expenses, they are eligible for an allowance according to article 3. This must be demonstrated and confirmed at the time of commencement of employment or start of the traineeship.

Article 7. Special provision
If the University takes steps, including environmental steps, that impact this regulation on commuting allowance, the regulation will be adjusted accordingly.

Article 8. Transition and guarantee regulation and exceptional agreements Employees who, in accordance with the Leiden University 2005 Regulation on Commuting Allowance, were paid prior to 1 June 2015 an amount (an allowance) that was higher than the amount to which they are entitled under the present regulation, will continue to receive the higher amount of the allowance. This guaranteed amount will be determined on 1 June 2015. This only applies in so far as the employee continues to be eligible for a commuting allowance under the terms of the older regulation.
Exceptional agreements made in parallel to the Leiden University 2005 Regulation on the Commuting Allowance remain unchanged throughout the period for which they hold.
